John Nicholl Company Relinquish Right of Way For Above Amount.

The city council Monday night ordered the city auditor to draw a warrant in favor of the John Nicholl company in payment of 12 lots over which the city and the Nicholl company have been contesting legal rights, and which has finally been adjusted by the company accepting $25,000 for the 12 lots which are located in the tunnel right of way. The warrant will be delivered to company on the acceptance of the deeds by the city.

With the tunnel right of way free from litigation, it is said preliminary work on the tunnel and highway will begin by the first of the year.

The city will require a supplemental agreement with the John Nicholl company before the final deeds are signed and the $25,000 paid over.

Richmond Has Five Banks.

A leading tract placing lots for sale advertises only four banks in Richmond, which is technically incorrect. Richmond has five banks, as follows:

Lawrence of Oakland, was found Sunday morning half famished in Redwood canyon by two young ranchers, who were with the searching party led by the girl's father. The girl's mental condition is supposed to be the cause of her actions.

Primary Election Laws Received

Ballot Will Now Be Divided Into Two Parts, Partisan and Non-Partisan.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Nov. 7.—The state department here has notified county clerks relative to the changes in the primary election law. The first half of the primary ballot will be partisan, and contain names of candidates for party nomination for state and congressional honors. The remaining half of the ballot contains the names of candidates for county offices. The names of all candidates who file petitions appear upon the ballot irrespective of party affiliation.

Voters who decline to state their politics will be given a "non-partisan ticket."

Blank spaces are left for writing in names of state and congressional candidates.

The form of the petition is further altered to allow more than one name on each blank. The affidavit of the candidate is also changed in that all reference to party affiliation is eliminated.

Lawrence, Mass., Strike Pictures

Next Sunday night, Nov. 9, at 8 o'clock Mr. Jas. P. Thompson of San Francisco, a labor organizer, well known around the bay cities, will present his series of stereopticon views in A. O. U. W. hall in this city. These views illustrate events in the great strike of textile workers in Lawrence, Mass., and also scenes of the terrible fire in the Triangle shirt waist factory in New York wherein the needless sacrifice of 147 women and girls aroused the indignation of all classes throughout the land. We are informed on reliable authority that these pictures are of the highest degree, instructive and well worth seeing by all who are interested in the labor movement. The small admission fee of ten cents will be charged to defray the expense of the hall.

Jessie Wilson Is Thirteenth Bride

Miss Jessie Wilson is the 13th White House bride, and the wedding date is set for November 25. It was on account of the 23d falling on Sunday, maybe, that the correct combination of lucky numbers (13-23-1913) were not used in dating the notable coming event at the nationalcapital.

The Terminal printed it for me.

BOOSTERETTES.

Boost for the Richmond, San Rafael railroad.

The highway center for Richmond will make things prosper in our city.

Mrs. Flora Armstrong of Kansas City has purchased property at Richmond City Center near 23d st.

Richmond is going to have a big carnival when the opening of the work on Richmond inner harbor begins.

Some experienced hotel men are after the Hotel Bouear for a lease. The location is unexcelled anywhere and the accommodations are metropolitan.

The Moose will erect its building through Richmond trade artisans They will have matters adjusted toward building and will have a beautiful 1915 home.

The Richmond Terminal's representative in Marin county reports great activity in the Richmond, San Rafael, Santa Rosa electric line. Operations of construction will begin about January 1.

The Terminal has always advocated employment of home builders of Richmond on Richmond building construction. There is scarcely a contractor who does not attend to this little duty now.

When the storms of winter break about February 1, the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe will erect their proposed beautiful depots. The blue prints show good taste and modern welfare.

A caller at the Terminal office remarked that the horse would soon go. "Then you will be sorry," quickly replied a teamster who overheard the remark. There is work for all.

Bonds of the city for improvements is an excellent thought, if the benefits derived bring in an amount equal to the cost of the bonds plus seven per cent per annum payable semi-annually.

Highway Appropriation.

The appropriation of $300,000 for highway improvments will give Contra Costa county advantages never dreamed of by the most optimistic. Good roads develop the resources of a country and raise land values quicker than any other improvements.

AUSTRALIAN BUTTER INVADES MARKET

First Shipment of 100 Tons Is Brought in Under New Tariff Law

If Colonial Dairy Product Meets With Favor, Large Consignments Will Be Made During Winter

San Francisco—More than 100 tons of Australian and New Zealand butter went on the market in San Francisco November 1.

This is the first of the shipments stimulated by the reduction of the duty by the Underwood bill to 2½ cents a pound.

The butter was brought in cold storage on the steamship Tahiti, which arrived from the colonies. The exact amount was 208,000 pounds, ten times as much Australian butter coming in as of California butter. The colonial supply was consigned to several firms.

There is a great deal of curiosity about this Australian butter. Dealers and grocers are desirous of knowing its flavor, because on this depends the extent to which it can be sold.

All admit that it can be produced in the Colonies and shipped here, paying the small duty, cheaper than the California article.

According to statements made by several dealers in dairy products, this shipment will prevent the price of butter rising above the present figure —32½ cents—this winter.

The heaviest shipments are expected in the winter months, not only because butter is then highest in California, but because production is at full swing in the colonies, the seasons being reversed and prices being cheaper in Australia between September and March.

Burbank Outdone; Oak Tree Produces Crop of Currants

Ukiah—While Luther Burbank is startling the world daily with some new creation in the way of strawless strawberries, gooseless gooseberries and white blackberries, Dame Nature has opened up competition and has put a good one over the Santa Rosa expert.

Mendocino county's latest creation is a large liveoak tree literally covered with currants. This novel tree is located in Low Gap, on the farm of C. W. Bradford.

The freak of nature is accounted for by the fact that the tree is growing in an old currant patch. Bradford believes that the roots of the oak tree got connected with those of the currant bushes.

Worry Over Coming Marriage Causes Youth to End Life

Nampa, Idaho — Worry over his probable inability to support and care for his future wife, whom he was to have married in a few days, was the cause of the suicide of Oscar Whitman, according to the coroner's jury. Young Whitman blew out his brains in a hardware store, where he was employed, after two weeks of despondency over fancied troubles. He had $300 saved and a good position; still, the worry of a probable failure in the matrimonial venture caused him to commit the act. The body was sent to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Whitman, at Oakdale, Cal.

Interior Department Will Change Land Office Methods

Washington—A reform in land procedure that will affect hundreds, if not thousands, of cases in the West was promised at a conference between Assistant Secretary Jones of the Interior Department and Representative Raker of California.

The department will soon issue regulations to provide that hereafter certificates will be issued by land office registers and receivers at the time that the claimants for mining lands make their final proof, instead of holding up certificates until after an investigation of the claim by the government.

Coast Commerce for Year Over Four Billion Dollars

Washington—The imports of the various ports on the Pacific ocean totaled $2,333,000,000 in 1912, and the exports aggregated $2,000,000,000 more, according to reports issued by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. China led, with imports of approximately $350,000,000. Japan with $300,000,000, the Straits $200,000,000, western South America $200,000,000. The United States supplied about 12 per cent of the imports at ports other than our own, while the United Kingdom handled 25 per cent.

Drastic Steps Necessary to Check Infantile Paralysis

Eureka—Determined to combat the threatened epidemic of infantile paralysis by every human agency, sparing neither cost nor private interests, the City Board of Health issued an order closing all Eureka schools. This includes the high, grammar and Catholic schools. All houses where the malady has manifested itself are held under rigid quarantine.

Lax Management Charged Against Insurance Directors

New York—Charges that the Board of Directors of the Equitable Life Assurance Society does not direct the affairs of that $486,000,000 institution are made by the State Insurance Department.

It also asserts that the record of the Board of Directors gives only meager accounts and that a committee of paid officials of the society has to a large extent usurped the functions of the board.

The board also comes in for criticism for the latitude that is allowed the comptroller in connection with the employment and discharge of an army of employes who are getting less than $5000 a year.

"Under the present system of this society, responsibility for its actions or the proper administration cannot be brought home to the Board of Directors as it should be."

It is also noted that the Equitable has advanced loans on real estate that are the reverse of conservative and that Frank Jordan, son of the former comptroller, Thomas D. Jordan, still has a monnoply of placing fire insurance on properties on which the Equitable makes mortgage loans.

$90,407 Will Be Spent to Improve State Institutions

Sacramento—The State Engineering Advisory Board approved the plans and estimates calling for $90,407 in improvements and buildings at nine different state institutions.

When her husband, a machinist out of work, decided to beat his way to the coast, where he believed he could obtain employment, Mrs. Marshall, rather than be separated from him, donned man's clothing and came with him.

When they started from Omaha they spent all their money for food and climbed into a box-car.

When they reached Seattle Mrs. Marshall could not stand, but her husband obtained lodgings for them and set out to find work. Mrs. Marshall came down town and losing her way appealed to a policeman for aid.

Auto Racer Killed as He Speeds 114 Miles an Hour

London—Percy Lambert, holder of many world's automobile speed records, was killed on the Brooklyn motor racetrack while making an effort to break the one-hour record.

Regan, who owns a chicken ranch on South Marengo avenue, protested to the police that ever since Knabenshue had been making flight, a majority of his finest egg-producing fowls refuse to lay. A number of other various chicken owners in this vicinity are making similar complaints.

Death of 1,000,000 Fish Threatens Salmon Shortage

Washington — A salmon famine is threatened on the Pacafic as the result of the death of 1,000,000 fish of this species in British Columbia. ## OWNER OF THE WHITE SOX

Charles Albert Comiskey, president and owner of the Chicago White Sox, was born in Chicago, Aug. 15, 1858. The "Old Roman," as Comiskey is affectionately known, began his baseball career in 1878 with the Dubuque, Ia., team. In 1882 he joined the St. Louis Browns, then in the American association, and in 1883 he was made manager of the team. In 1885-1886 the Browns, under his management, defeated the Chicago White Stockings for the world's championship. Comiskey remained with St. Louis until 1890, when he took charge of the Players' league club in Chicago. He returned to St. Louis in 1891, and in 1892 went to Cincinnati, where he managed the Reds until 1895. That year he placed a Western league team in St. Paul, transferring it to Chicago in 1900 and joining the American league. Under Comiskey's ownership the Chicago White Sox have won three American league championships and one world's championship. As a first baseman Comiskey had no superior, and as a big league magnate he is hailed everywhere as the prince of club owners.

Fun in a Museum.

The idea of a pink rosette being tied on the 50-foot tail of the diplodocus, a giant creature that roamed the western plains a million years ago, is shocking in the extreme to bespectacled men of fathomless minds, although others treat the matter as a huge joke.

The affair occurred recently in the Carnegie institute at Pittsburg. At the time there were few people in the museum of the institute, and the guard had strolled afield. A party of young women went through. They whispered and giggled of wagers. They looked down and looked back, and no one was in sight. Then one young creature slid a large pink rosette from beneath her motor coat. In a jiffy she tied it on the tail of the big diplodocus. Then they all slipped away, their hearts beating fast.

Discovery shocked the attendants and now every moment some guard in the museum twists his head around suddenly and looks suspiciously at the tail of the diplodocus. In his fancy he sees the same pink rosette that caused all the trouble.

WERE ADDING FUEL TO FIRE

Sailors Not Aware of Error They Were Committing In Pouring Water on the Lime.

The crew of the British steamer Hartington, which is now discharging a huge cargo of coal for Uncle Sam at California City, had an exciting lesson in chemistry on arriving here from Norfolk. Shortly after dropping anchor of Meiggs wharf a launch came alongside. This launch brought out a quantity of provisions and other articles that had been ordered by the agent of the steamer some days before its arrival.

Some lime was needed for various purposes on the big freighter and one barrel of the white stuff was among the supplies taken out on the launch. The barrel was among the first cargo put on the steamer from the little boat alongside. There was quite a swell on at the time and through a little opening in the barrel as it reposed on deck the spray sprinkled the inclosed lime until the swollen contents loosened some of the joints of the barrel. When the sailors lowered the barrel into the forward hold the sizzling and smoking were really on. In alarm they rushed to the officer on deck and told him there must be a fire, as volumes of white smoke were curling their way up from the hold.

The officer, supposedly much wiser, was just as perturbed at the situation as his men and ordered a spraying from a hose on the line. The more water it received the more the lime smoked and the crew rushed about to get auxiliary fire apparatus.

At just the height of the hurly-burly the chief engineer came on deck. He took in the situation at a glance.

"What are you darn fools doing, anyway? Trying to drown us all?"

The hose brigade was quickly called off and the lime got no more of the aqua pura that it so dearly wanted in order to have its smoke.

AUTHORITY RENDS HIDEOUS FASHION

Nothing Pretty or Graceful About New Idea Which Is Affected in Paris.

MAY BE ONLY PASSING FAD

To Be Deplored Because Trend of Season's Costumes Has Been All for Beauty and Grace—Newest Models Show Absolutely Natural Lines.

PARIS.—At this time of the year a dress expert may learn a great deal from the fashions seen at Biarritz, writes Claude Cherys in the Washington Post. I do not mean the fashions displayed on the Grande Plage or the Casino, but those shown privately in the ateliers of the great Paris dressmakers who have branch establishments at this particular seaside resort.

From the point of view of dress Biarritz in the month of September resembles Monte Carlo in the month of February. At both these fashion centers the newest and most exclusive models are shown before they are shown in Paris, and the reason is not difficult to find. The members of the court circles of Spain all meet at Biarritz and San Sebastian in the months of August and September. They return to Madrid early in October, and they then take back with them a generous supply of dresses, wraps, etc., for the winter season.

Now, the pretty Spanish woman is devoted to dress, and she demands everything of the latest and newest. More than this, she is eclectic in her taste, even though she sometimes inclines toward brilliant colors and gorgeous details.

She is, as a rule, very rich; she is always ready to pay well for that which is really original and becoming. For all these reasons, the Spanish beauties are beloved by the autocrats of the Rue de la Paix.

Protest Called For.

I have been making a series of visits to the notable Parisian dressmakers and tailors who have branch ateliers in Biarritz. I have been carefully studying the novelties displayed by each one, and I have come to the conclusion that it is necessary to enter, early in the fall and winter seasons, a word of strong protest. We have arrived at a memorable moment in the history of dress. We have quietly, almost unconsciously, reached a period in which the female form divine is displayed to perfection, because it is displayed gracefully and naturally.

All through the summer our women of fashion have been wearing tricot corsets and swathed ceintures, which permitted the waist to assume a perfectly normal outline. And the corsages, as well as the cleverly draped skirts which have been adopted by the more exclusive Parisiennes, have been eminently graceful and even classic. Notwithstanding all the protests which have been called up by foolish women who take delight in attracting unpleasant attention and who bear no real relationship with women of fashion in the right sense of the words, we have arrived at a period in the history of dress which is very nearly ideal.

Atrocious Fashion.

Never have women looked prettier nor more graceful than this year. Never have their dresses and mantles more clearly expressed the feminine not which is so entirely desirable. All was well in the world of dress, and it is distressing to find that certain Parisian dressmakers are giving countenance to a fashion which can only be described as an atrocity.

I am now alluding to the growing tendency in Paris in certain circles to alter the outline of the figure below the waist; to give it that peculiar and most unsightly curve outward which was adopted last summer by one or two Parisian actresses and which became a sort of fashion.

Last summer it was rather the thing in some circles to stand in a loose, dislocated pose, to throw out the stomach—for I am obliged to use the real word—and to throw in the back. It was absurd, but as a passing fad people laughed good-naturedly at it. But this autumn it is unfortunately true that some of our leading Parisian dressmakers are trying, and trying hard, to make this horrible and ridiculous outward curve a permanent fashion. They are even going so far as to pad the corsets in order that the figure may seem to curve outward below the waist line in front.

Designated as Disgusting.

Now this is simply disgusting! More than that, it is inartistic and meaningless. Twenty or thirty years ago it was the fashion to wear a hideous thing called a "bustle." If old photographs are to be relied on these outrageous affairs completely destroyed the beauty of the feminine outline. But they were quickly laughed out of existence. Since then we are supposed to have made some progress in matters of art and dress. We are supposed to have reached a period in the world's history in which true estheticism has its own appointed place; in which it is the duty, as well as the pleasure, of the designer to follow the indications of nature and to give to the feminine form all that is due to it. In short, we are supposed to have realized that a woman's dress ought to be strictly personal; that it ought to permit her to move her limbs freely and ought to accentuate her finest features. This is common sense; it is also artistic sense.

NEW FALL GOWN.

Model of dark blue corduroy with panel of moire ribbon. Collar and cuffs of brocaded satin. Blouse trimmed with lace.

We have reached this desirable period, and we are now going to cast our artistic aspirations to the winds at the bidding of those persons who are merely seeking for startling novelties and for cheap advertisements? No—no—no!

Deserves to Be Hooted.

I protest against this new, so-called "fashion." I shall never cease to protest against it. The woman who accepts a corset which has been designedly fashioned into an outward curve in front below the waist line deserves to be hooted in the streets. The persons who hooted her would have all my sympathy.

I saw this week one of the newest fall models. The material of this dress was velours de laine in a deep shade of bordeaux red. Velours de laine is one of the favorite materials of the year, and it is being made in all the rich shades of purple, puce, red and blue. This material combines well with bands of fox or sable, and it will be very much used for tailored suits when the winter season sets in. The peculiar apron effect is now and will be seen on some of the more exclusive models this fall.

In the model indicated this voluminous apron was buttoned over a tunic of rich black lace bordered with sable. The corsage was fashioned in blouse form, and the folded waistband was made of dull silk in the same shade as the dress material. The big button at the back was made of deep red enamel and cut jet, and there was a buckle to match on the front of the ceinture.

Absolutely Natural Lines.

The bust and waist lines are absolutely natural. The hips are neither compressed nor accentuated; they also are natural. And it is this pose which is to be made ridiculous by the intervention of sensation hunters.

The material of this dress was charmeuse, in the new shade of puce, which has more than a tinge of red in it. The skirt was moderately wide at the hem and it had a shaped flounce which gave a slight hoop effect. Then the short tunic was made of crepe de chine in the same shade as the charmeuse, while the softly folded bands of silk which circled hips and waist were in Egyptian blue peau de soie. The sleeves were absurdly short, almost like the sleeves of a child's party frock. They were arranged in a series of plaited frills and the decollete neck was outlined with a smart little ermine tie. Stuck in the waistband there was a large velvet rose in a vivid shade of rose dubarry pink.

One of the most remarkable features of the newest autumn and winter models may be said to be the ultra short tunic. These curious little garments hardly pass the hip line. Sometimes they are draped, as that shown in my sketch; sometimes they fall in straight lines.

Fashion Proves Popular.

These quaint little tunics will be mounted over pleated skirts of liberty satin or charmeuse, and they will also be very much worn with lace dresses. The Parisiennes are becoming more and more pleased with the idea of wearing semi-evening dresses in the afternoon under voluminous wraps, and this fashion will continue in favor all through the coming winter. It will probably remain in full flood of favor for the next ten or twelve months.

A very charming Russian woman, who is one of the notable beauties of the Biarritz season, recently assured me that this fashion of wearing very fragile dresses under fur wraps in the depths of winter came from her land.

Wearing Other Folks' Limbs.

Dr. A. L. Soresi, a New York surgeon, a few days ago remarked that he hopes shortly to be able to prove that it is possible to graft new limbs on human beings to replace lost ones, using limbs from persons not long dead. No—we can't dispute his ability to do this thing, nor the possibility of it, for there are too many wonders daily coming to pass that were but yesterday believed impossibilities. But won't it be rather—er—uncanny, to say the least, to go around wearing the arm or the leg of a deceased person—or persons? One would expect considerable nervous irritation and perhaps insomnia to arise from the contemplation of such a condition, wouldn't one?

A Compromise.

"I have two guests here, a wrestler and a dealer in stocks. What shall I give them to drink?"

"Give the wrestler some punch, and the stock dealer, plenty of water."

IN THE BEER GARDEN

What Happened When Little Old Lady's Sense of Maternal Love Was Stirred.

It was a curious thing to have happened in a summer garden. But the little old lady was a curious figure here. With a prosperous-looking middle-aged man, who looked as if he were her son, and three other women, apparently her daughter-in-law and two daughters, she sat at a table under the trees. The man had a stein of beer before him. The women were all served with glasses of beer. Even the little old lady had a glass of beer before her, but she didn't seem to care for it, for every few minutes she lifted a glass of water to her lips. The other women were nibbling at pretzels. The old lady had a ham sandwich.

But she was enjoying the evening. Fascinated, she watched the fat, black-haired little bandmaster. She could not remember ever having seen anything quite so absurd outside a circus, no doubt. When the cabaret singers, in their gaudy costumes, but scant, came among the tables singing and dancing, the little old lady first made sure that it was quite proper to look at them, then she looked with all her might. She found them startling and quite shameless. But she did not blush, because neither her daughter-in-law nor her own daughters were visibly affected by the expose. They took it quite as a matter of course.

The little old lady wore a bonnet with a small black pompon. There was the faintest touch of white ruching about her throat. Her glasses were attached with a long black string and a black pin to her bosom. She wore a black surah silk dress. When she walked you noticed a little train to her skirt. Black silk gloves covered the thin hands. She didn't seem to have any eyebrows. Her eyes were gray and faded, but her smile was perpetual. She was proud of her son and her daughters and her son's wife. She was enjoying the evening surrounded by her brood. It did not matter whether it was a beer garden or what. Places make very little difference to old ladies when they are in the midst of their children.

When the near-artist with the long nose, the sallow skin, the curly long hair, the flowing black tie and the white canvas shoes passed her table, she snickered. Nobody else even noticed the queer-looking specimen, so she straightened her face quickly and tried to be polite after that.

When the two young boys with red cheeks and tan shoes sat down at the table near her with a couple of painted women old enough to be their mothers, the little old lady sighed heavily. She seemed to forget the pleasures of the evening. She said something to her son, while her eyes remained glued to the newcomers, but her son only smiled at her, shook his head and refused to consider the companionship worthy of wonder.

But when the little eight-year-old with the golden locks stopped by her side and gave her a flower that she had begged from her mother's bouquet, the old lady's eyes brightened and she patted the little shoulder lovingly, and proudly put the pretty flower through the pin that held her glasses.

It was evident that there were many things that puzzled her, other things that hurt her and still others that delighted her. She found a little of everything in the ever-changing group of beer garden frequenters.

It was when a little girl, whose cheeks, eyes and walk bespoke indulgence in too much wine, came toward her that the curious thing happened. The girl was a pale, slender thing, with a mop of golden brown hair and big, trusting, hopeful eyes. She was poorly, yet neatly, dressed. The man with her was old and worldly-wise. His eyes snapped in anticipation as he noted the uncertain steps of the girl. But when the girl's eyes met those of the little old lady, she stopped dead still. She swayed unsteadily and fell at the old lady's feet, with a hoarse cry of "Mamma."

Her escort started to lift her to her feet, but the little old lady was too quick for him.

Her son and her son's wife and her daughters were aghast. They tried to draw her from the girl's side.

"You must not touch her," they said in one breath, "she's a creature of the streets."

"Maybe so," said the little old lady, as she rubbed the girl's forehead with her handkerchief, cooled with fresh water, "but she needs care just the same."

Then she looked around to say something to the girl's escort, but he was not there, not knowing just how to handle little old ladies.

"Mother, this will not do," said the man. "This girl must go."

"My son, this girl's got a mother somewhere and she needs her. Until she finds her, I'm going to take her place."

And as the party left the beer garden, a little old lady straightened the black pompon on her bonnet, put her arm about the girl to steady her, as they made their way to her son's automobile, waiting outside.

And that was not all she did for the foolish little girl, but it was all that the frequenters of the garden saw.—New York Press.

Far From It.

"The way to be happy is to let well enough alone."

"Maybe so, but that's no way to get your name in the newspapers."

Bane of Curiosity.

"Curiosity has been the bane of womankind ever since the first apple was ripe," declared Bulger, as he stormed out of the house and slammed the door behind him.

On the way down to his office he stopped ten minutes to see a man replace an automobile tire, seven minutes to watch a steeplejack painting a church spire, and fifteen minutes to catch sight of a noted actress, who was expected to come out of a hotel side door.

EYE PLAYS IMPORTANT PART

Eccentricities of Genius Traced to the Sight—Some Notable Instances to Prove It.

It seems that at last genius is discovered not to be allied to insanity, but that rather all its eccentricities are due to eye strain.

Brain specialists, for instance, are asserting that if Carlyle had had properly adjusted glasses and a good electric light to work by, instead of skylight over his desk, and that illumined by a London fog much of the time, he would not have been such a grumbler and dyspeptic; in fact, eye strain was the cause of all his eccentricities.

All geniuses, in fact, would have been optimistic, says science now, if they had only had bifocal glasses at the right time. The same unnormal eyesight is given as the cause of many tragic paintings. That famous artist, Turner, would never have painted the slave ship in a storm, but would rather have depicted the peaceful landscapes that so many artists paint when their eyes are properly fitted with glasses.

Wagner, too, if he had worn the correct spectacles and had had that decided tilt to one eye remedied, probably would never have written about Walkyrie and dragons, but would never have given to the world his theory of evolution which stirred society up if his eyes had been normal.

De Quincey suffered from bad eyes. Surely he would never have taken opium if he had had glasses; but, then, on the other hand, the world would have missed his opium dreams. And, after all is considered, scientists conclude society could better dispense with spectacles than with geniuses.

Can't Bet on Them.

In a lobby of a Washington hotel the other night the conversation turned to the fads and foibles of the fair sex, when Congressman Milton W. Shreve of Erie recalled an incident that happened in his home town.

Some time since, so related the congressman, one of a certain party of men started a remark with the words, "I bet that 'she' will do anything! You can never tell what a woman will do!"

"Yes," protested the young man, "but I was going to bet that she would do the unexpected."

"Don't do it!" was the quick response of the older man. "Even that is not a safe bet!"

WOMAN ESCAPES OPERATION

By Timely Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Here is her own statement.

Cary, Maine.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and was fat and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good-health to your medicine."—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Cary, Maine.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

All Blood Disorders Quickly Driven Away

Astonishing Results With the Greatest Blood Purifier Ever Discovered.

Strength, Power, Accomplishment are all Typified in S. S. S.

Some blood disorders become deeply rooted in the glands and tissues, and the mistake is made of resorting to drastic drugs. These only aggravate by causing other and worse troubles. A host of people know this to be true. They know from painful experience.

To get right down into where the blood is vitiated requires S. S. S. the greatest blood purifier ever discovered.

This remarkable remedy contains one ingredient, the active purpose of which is to stimulate the tissues to the healthy selection of its own essential nutriment and the medicinal elements of this matchless blood purifier are just as essential to well balanced health as the nutritious elements of the meats, grains, fats and sugars of our daily food.

Not only this, but if from the presence of some disturbing poison there is a local or general interference of nutrition to cause boils, carbuncles, abscesses and kindred troubles, S. S. S. so directs the local cells that this poison is rejected and eliminated from their presence.

Then, too, S. S. S. has such specific stimulation on these local cells as to preserve their mutual welfare and a proper relative assistance to each other.

In a very brief time S. S. S. has the reconstructive process so under control that remarkable changes are observed. All eruptive places heal, mysterious pains and aches have disappeared, and from head to foot there is a conscious sensation of renewed health.

From the fact that S. S. S. is purely a botanical preparation, it is accepted by the weakest stomach and has great tonic influence. Not one drop of drugs or minerals is used in its preparation. Ask for S. S. S. and insist upon having it. And if you desire skillful advice upon any matter concerning the blood and skin write to The Swift Specific Co., 208 Swift Bldg, Atlanta, Ga. Do not allow some zealous clerk to harrup the atmosphere in eloquence over something "just as good" as S. S. S. Beware of all counterfeits.

Oregon's eight hour law seems to have been framed not to apply to state institutions. ## THE PRINTSHOP TOWEL.

That used to hang up by the printing house door
I think that nobody in these days of shoddy

Each rubbed some grime off white they put a heap on
In, over and under, 'twas blacker than thunder
'Twas harder than poverty, rougher than sin;
From roller suspended, it never was bended,
And it flapped on the wall like a banner of tin.
It grew thicker and rougher, and harder and tougher,
And daily put on a far inkier hue,
Until one windy morning without any warning,
It fell to the floor and was broken in two.

OPEN FORUM

To the Editor of The Terminal:

A Beautiful Dream.

An east of the subway resident dreamed that the subway was being improved with elevated walks for foot passengers, protected by beautifully designed railings in bronze; deep velvet carpets and gorgeous Persian rugs covered the tile flooring. The incline to the center of the subway was imperceptible, the fine work of the engineer's skill. At different points grottos with upholstered reclining chairs were provided for the weary and faint. Pink lemonade and cigarettes were served by fairies. The noise and din of the railroad trains and street cars was heard no more, as the acoustic properties had received the attention of the foreign designer from Paris, (Illinois).

But the eastsider said his dream came abruptly to an end, and like Nemo, he had fallen out of bed, and rubbing his eyes, donned his mackintosh and waders and started for the subway in reality, with its steep inclines and narrow passage way, its dangerous iron supports to crash into; its clamminess and darkness, to say nothing of the mutilation of Richmond's best thoroughfare.

WORK FOR 1000 MEN.

Growth in all new cities follows lines of least resistance. There is a consensus of a majority of public opinion that work on Richmond municipal harbor should begin at the inner harbor and work outward. By the time the litigation for tunnel right of way is settled, it is argued, the work on Richmond inner harbor would be well advanced, and perhaps the outer harbor. Then the tunnel could be completed last. Construction on the inner harbor would give 1000 men employment at once.

The Southern Pacific railway company adopted a novel plan in Stockton to keep tab on a railway crossing to ascertain how many persons in one day actually were on the lookout at railroad crossings for approaching trains. Of 4080 persons who crossed the track on one street in ten hours, only 60 looked up and down the right of way for approaching trains. As an example of the carelessness of persons crossing rail road tracks, one man driving a four-horse team and leading two horses in the rear, was asleep on the wagon seat. This looks like carelessness on the part of the people—not the raiload.

Can You Name the Big Chief.

The Fifth street fire house promises to be erected soon. In it will be a jail, and this improvement is in the center of the city. Chief Paasch and Chief Evans may be aspirants for big chief, as the time has arrived when the city should have one paid fire chief, who will go down street at about 75 miles an hour with his gong tuned to a high key going ting a-ling, ting-a-ling-ling-ling. Go back the fire is out.

Improvements and building municipal harbors should not be assessed to taxpayers. Concessions should be leased for long terms to orporations, the income paying annual interest and principal on bonds.

Spasmodic Advertising.

One of the greatest authorities on advertising says "the day of hit and miss advertising is past—in fact, such a day never was. It is the persistent advertiser who has made good. It is not necessary to advertise on a large scale. The small merchant should advertise in a small way. Successful firms set aside a percentage of the gross sales for advertising and never exceed it. As business grows the revenue grows in proportion to the gross sales.

The test of advertising is not one issue, one month or six months. It is two, three and four years of persistent advertising. Then the profits come back.

Origin of the Cigarette.

The Aztecs, it is believed, are responsible for the cigarette. The Spaniards first got a whiff of the cigarette when they invaded Mexico under Cortes. The Aztecs then used tobacco in no other form, and the Spaniards learned from them how to roll the little package into smokable shape. They introduced the cigarette into Europe, and by that route it found its way into America, though it was nearly 200 years reaching here. The Aztecs were also using cocoa and its product, chocolate, when Cortes conquered them, and it was not long until the whole of Europe was eating the various preparations of this bean. When the Spaniards first tasted it they named it theobromus, from the two Greek words meaning "food of the gods."

Trousers.

Modern trousers came into fashion in 1812, yet the column of Trajan shows a group of Sarmatians clothed in trousers that are just like ours. As early as A. D. 69 a Roman general created great scandal by going to war in trousers, which were regarded as "barbarian." When the Bulgarian King Boris was converted to Christianity in the seventh century, among the 106 questions he propounded to the pope was whether it was lawful for Christians to wear trousers. The explanation of this is that the Bulgarians had long been among the trousered peoples, but as conversion was coming from the flowing robed Greeks they feared that robes instead of trousers might be essential to Christianity.

All About Stealing.

"Why do you call your story 'The Thieves' Romance?'"

"Because it is all about stealing."

"How?"

"Well, the story of the romance goes this way: 'She stole a look; then he stole a kiss. Next they had stolen meetings, they stole a march on their friends and both stole away.'"

"I suppose the next thing they will be stealing back."

It Couldn't Be.

Dean Farrar quotes Tennyson as having related to him the remark of a farmer who, after hearing a fire and brimstone sermon from an old style preacher, consoled his wife by saying: "Never mind, Sally. That must be wrong. No constitooshun couldn't stand it."

Cumulative.

"George has given me an engagement ring with three diamonds in it," said Henrietta.

"Yes, I know," said Marietta. "He always adds a diamond every time he gets engaged. It only had one when I wore it."—Harper's Weekly.

Showing Progress.

Minister—Young man, do you know how to dance? Young Man—Well, parson, I know the holds, but I don't know the steps.—Life.

A Domestic Jar.

"And several of your schoolmates are working right in this town for $10 a week," retorted Everyman, "while one of them is in jail. I guess in marrying a chap getting $1,500 a year your average is fairly good."

And then Everybaby set up a howl, and they had to stop quarreling to attend to him.—Pittsburgh Post.

Servian Women.

There is no country in the world where women occupy a more dignified or honored position in the home than Servia. The Servian idea is quite different from that of the Turk, who keeps his women behind shut doors, or the German, whose ideal woman is a good hausfrau. In Servia the woman is the companion of the man. A man is responsible for his unmarried sisters, and throughout the Balkan states it is considered rather a breach of etiquette for him to marry before his older sister. No Servian girl would feel she could hold up her head in society unless she could speak four languages. There is hardly a Servian woman who cannot play some musical instrument. Embroidery, painting, drawing and sculpture are all studied. Politics is a popular feature among women. Servian women are very domesticated, and the highest ladies pay personal attention to trivial matters of housekeeping —London Tit-Bits.

When the Worm Turns.

"But the point is, my dear sir," the father asked in pompous tones, "can you support my girl in the style to which she has been accustomed?"

"I'm afraid not."

"Then what the"—

The young man waived the remark aside.

"She has assured me, however," he added, "that she will not expect me to buy so many gloves as I have been providing or to take her away from home whenever she wants anything good to eat. Nor does she expect to ride in a taxi, as we have always done, when a tram will do. In short, we are going to live quite sensibly, and"—

"Oh, all right!" growled the father. "If you are going to be mean about the business take her!"

Gladstone on the Balkans.

The traditional opposition of Bulgaria to Turkey constituted, according to Mr. Gladstone, one of the chief factors of European progress. Speaking of the Balkan peoples, he once said:

"They are like a shelving beach which restrains the ocean. That beach, it is true, is beaten by the waves; it is laid desolate; it produces nothing; it becomes perhaps nothing save a mass of shingle, of rock, of almost useless seaweed. But it is a fence behind which the cultivated earth can spread and escape the incoming tide, and such was the resistance of Bulgarians, of Servians and of Greeks. It was that resistance which left Europe to claim the enjoyment of her own religion and to develop her institutions and her laws."—London Chronicle.
